THE 10th BIENNIAL CONFERENCE of ASIAN ASSOCIATION of SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGY

Yogyakarta - Indonesia, August 20-23, 2013

Theme:

Enhancing Quality of Life through Community Integrity and Cultural Diversity: Promoting Indigenous,
Social and Cultural Psychology

Faculty of Psychology
Universitas Gadjah Mada
in collaboration with
Indonesia Psychological Association
(HIMPSI)

The goal of social psychology is to provide an understanding of cognitive, affective and social processes that govern human behavior and society. In order to achieve this goal, it is important to examine the influence of indigenous and local context and the wisdom that have been achieved from experiential, community and cultural knowledge around the world. By integrating basic psychological and social processes with knowledge derived from indigenous and community involvement, researchers can be much more effective in applying psychological, social, and cultural knowledge to improve the quality of life and community integrity. The goal of the Tenth Biennial Conference of Asian Association of Social Psychology is to provide a platform in which basic psychological and social knowledge could be integrated with indigenous and cultural knowledge and to apply this integrated knowledge to improve the quality of life in the global community. The conference will provide a forum for researchers, psychologists, students and academics in Asia and around the world to meet, present, and share their views, insights and research in order to achieve the goal and the theme of the conference: Enhancing Quality of Life through Community Integrity and Cultural Diversity.
